Book Review Guidelines
Ethics & Medicine: An International Journal of Bioethics

We welcome reviews of recent books on ethics, philosophy, theology, clinical medicine, scientific research, law and policy, cultural developments, and other themes relevant to bioethical inquiry. The works should be of general interest for an academic readership, rather than from a highly technical perspective. As a general policy, Ethics & Medicine does not publish reviews of self-published works or those issued outside of traditional publishing venues.

Reviews should offer an analysis consistent with the perspective of Judeo-Christian Hippocratism, or at least not in opposition to the approach of Ethics & Medicine as a journal, with a length of 750 to 1250 words. A good review will identify the key ideas of the book and clearly outline its strengths and weaknesses. Authors interested in submitting a lengthier review essay covering one or several works should contact a Book Review Editor for additional guidance.

Authors must provide written confirmation that the submission is solely the work of the listed authors, and attest that they have not used generative AI, LLMs, nor any similar artificial intelligence program to develop or contribute to the content or citations. This policy does not apply to submissions in which the analysis of such generated material is germane to the subject of the submission. In such cases, the content must be clearly documented in the submission, noting which generative AI product and exact prompts. Authors should include a supplemental statement to the editors of Ethics & Medicine explaining the necessity of the use of generative AI specific to their submission.

Reviews should be submitted in Word format, with 12pt Times New Roman font and double-spaced, left-justified, with normal (1") margins and without page numbers. The book's details should appear first, in this format:

Title.
Author, Publisher, year.
ISBN xxx-x-xxxx-xxxx-x, xx pages, Binding, price.

Example:

> Bioethics: A Primer for Christians, 4th edition.
> Gilbert Meilaender, Eerdmans, 2020.
> ISBN 978-0-8028-7816-8, 156 pages, Paperback, $20.99.

Direct quotes from the book you are reviewing should appear in quotes, followed by a page number. Example:

> In her introduction, the author states, "Bioethics is the art of the possible" (p. 12).

References to other books should use the Chicago Manual of Style 18th edition, Full Notes style (in endnote formatting). All other guidelines for submissions to Ethics & Medicine should be followed.

Your signature should appear at the end with your job title and university affiliation. If you do not currently hold an academic appointment, your city and country will suffice. Example:

Michael J. Sleasman, PhD, Director of Bioethics Programs, LeTourneau University

Send your review to: bookreview@ethicsandmedicine.com. All book reviews will be approved and edited by one of our Book Review Editors (currently Daniel Crouch, Jon Holmlund, and Dennis Sansom).